Unite New Zealand — An Emancipation Proclamation

Mana Motuhake

"Māku anō hei hanga i tōku nei whare.
As for me, I shall build my own house."
Kīngi Tāwhiao · Second Māori King · (circa 1822–1894)

1. MANA MOTUHAKE — Individual Independence, Collective Flourishing

Note that Kīngi Tāwhiao did not say Māku anō hei hanga i tō tātou whare. He did not say As for me, I shall build your house for you, nor I shall build our house for us all. He stood as an expression of emancipation and an example for others to follow. Independence is not the end purpose of Mana Motuhake. It is the foundation upon which we become more capable of serving others. The ability to think independently, exercise sound judgment, reason and stand upon one's own feet enables us to be of greater service to our spouses, children, families, communities and nation.

2. THE PHILOSOPHY OF LEADERSHIP — Leaders Build Leaders

The fullest expression of human potential may be found in the potential we enable in others. Every person who places their signature alongside mine brings their own experiences, dreams, aspirations and unrealised potential. Their signature is an expression of their own will. We must never confuse leadership with ownership, nor service with the creation of dependency. We are not God. Our responsibility is to provide an example through our own lives and impart knowledge through which others may determine their own direction.

3. LEE TAITUHA'S FOUNDING PHILOSOPHY — Emancipation

I have built my house — Unite New Zealand, founded upon the written Constitution of New Zealand and its economic reform. You are welcome to enter it, inspect its foundations, question its construction and explore the knowledge upon which I have built it. My purpose is not to have you remain within my house, but to impart the knowledge through which you may build your own. I stand upon my own feet so that I may help others stand upon theirs.
